Arsenal fans may avoid second-leg tie vs CSKA

THE TIMES, LONDON

London: Arsenal fans may be deterred from travelling to the Europa League quarter final second-leg tie against CSKA Moscow because of the political stand-off between Russia and Britain, according to the head of the club's supporters' association.

The fixture is due to take place in the Russian capital on April 12, a week after the first leg in London. Calls for sanctions against Russia over the poisoning of the former spy Sergei Skripal and his daughter in Salisbury have included appeals for football games and the World Cup to be boycotted.

Coincidentally, the Emirates Stadium became part of the investigation into the poisoning of the former KGB agent Alexander Litvinenko the last time the teams met, in 2006. The chief suspect, Andrei Lugovoi, went to the Champions League match a few hours after meeting Litvinenko and some weeks later, minute traces of the radioactive substance polonium-210 — which had been used to do plan to travel to Moscow. It murder Litvinenko — were found at the stadium.

Lois Langton, the chairwoman of the Arsenal Independent Supporters' Association, said: "It's a hot potato of a draw in view of the political stand-off between the UK and Russia at CSKA have insisted that there will be no risk to travelling fans, with a spokesman telling Sky Sports News: "We "The association will work are happy to play Arsenal and with the club to help ensure the don't see any danger for Eng-safety of those supporters who lish fans who would like to come to Moscow. We have already played Manchester United this season in Moscow and everything went well."

Uefa, the tournament organiser, said that it was "committed to remain politically neutral and will not get involved in governmental af-

It said in a statement: "As is the case in all our competitions, Uefa has rules regarding safety and security in relation to the organisation of matches and works closely with all clubs and local authorities to ensure all necessary measures are implemented to guarantee safety for Arsenal published the latest advice from the Foreign Office on their website after the draw. The advice was updated this week to warn of "possible anti-British sentiment" due to the "heightened political tensions between the UK and Russia' and to recommend that visitors avoid commenting publicly on political developments.

"Perhaps Fifa wanted to stick to month of June as the time for the tournament," said an official of the All India Football Federation (AIFF), India. in its bid, said they would like to shift the meet to October since the weather would be extremely hot in June.

Also, Fifa's reluctance to award back-to-back tournaments to Asia could be one of the reasons why India did not find favour. Last year the under-20 World Cup was hosted by South Korea.

Fifa, however, has put on hold the decision to stop both the under-17 and under-20 World Cups and start an annual under-18 Youth World championship with 48 teams.

"After discussing the pros and cons of adopting a different strategy for the future international youth competitions, the Fifa council decided to stick to the existing structure of biennial U-17 and U-20 tournaments for both men and women," said the world body.

The U-20 World Cup has featured players such Diego Maradona and Lionel Messi who would go on to becomes legends of the game. While the legendary Maradona played in the 1979 edition in Japan, Messi featured in the 2005 tournament in the Netherlands. The last edition of the tournament was held in South Korea last year. Argentina have won the tournament most number of times (six), followed by their South American rivals Brazil, who triumphed on five occasions.
